BOOK REVIEW

- Aviation Law: Cases and Materials
 By Robert M. Jarvis, James T. Crouse, James R. Fox, and Gregory S. Walden
Rod D. Margo 249

Dear Reader,

On behalf of all members of the 2005-2006 Transportation Law Journal ("TLJ"), I am pleased to introduce Volume 33:1-2, the final publication of this year's Board. This double issue represents the culmination of a tremendous effort on the part of our student members throughout the spring semester. I am extremely proud of their accomplishment.

The success of this year's TLJ would not have been possible without the tireless devotion of the Journal's Executive Board. Kelly Fischer and Lindsey Sabec, Executive Articles Editors, continually went far above the call of duty to ensure the quality and integrity of our publications. Naomi Perera, Associate Articles Editor, stepped in at a crucial point in this year's editing schedule and performed an extremely difficult task with astounding determination. Phillip DeCaro was instrumental in attracting articles for publication and maintaining communication with our authors. Cecilia Reyna accomplished her tasks as Business Editor with great skill and proficiency. It has been an honor to work with such fine individuals.

I would also like to thank the TLA for their continued support. The TLJ provides students at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law an opportunity to interact with professionals in the growing field of transportation law, to contribute to the school's academic environment, and refine their research and writing skills. We are greatly appreciative to the TLA for their assistance in making this possible.

Finally, I would like to thank the many fine individuals who graciously contributed to this publication as authors. We were fortunate to receive insightful and informative pieces from distinguished attorneys and experts in the area of transportation law (including the review of an exciting new Aviation Law case book). In addition, many student authors volunteered to explore relevant areas of transportation law on behalf of the TLJ. Thank you for your contribution!

I hope you enjoy these articles and find them of value. If you have any questions, comments, or suggestions, on this issue or any other, please email me at swichern06@law.du.edu.

Respectfully,

Stephen Wichern
