From the end of a trail a man looks back

For forty years he trod a trail that ran between his office and his home and for forty years made every client's problems his problems too. Came then the day when for the last time he prepared to lock his office door and once more travel down that well-worn trail. For the last time too he closed the covers of a long-familiar book, and as he pondered how that book had served his needs, Le Grand J. Woods, Esq. of Corpus Christi, Texas, of his own accord sat down and wrote to us

"I am retiring from the practice of law—but I want you to know how much I have enjoyed and appreciated your great works. No successful lawyer can get along without them and would be very foolish to attempt to do so. I feel indebted to Shepard's Citations for whatever success I may have had in the practice of law for 40 years."

What greater tribute could we hope to earn?
