

Which Creative Commons licence is right for me?

Instructions

Before you start:

Ask yourself a few questions before starting:

- Make sure your work is copyright-able
- Make sure you have the rights
- Make sure you understand how Creative Commons licenses operate
- Be specific about what you are licensing
- Are you a member of a society? If so, does it allow you to CC-license your works?

Once you have considered these questions Begin moving through the workflow at Start Here!

when you are ready to create your Creative Commons license go to:

<https://creativecommons.org/choose/>

remember that you can even CC license content that is not Online by selecting the "license Mark" as Offline.

Remember to be as thorough as possible and have your TASL+D info ready.

1. Title
2. Author (tell reusers who to give credit)
3. Source (Link to source)
4. License (link to CC license Deed)
5. Date (date of creation)

Start here!

Am I ok with other people copying and distributing my content without asking my permission everytime?

No

I should use "All Rights Reserved" copyright to protect my content.

Yes

Am I ok with them changing and adapting the content? Will I allow remixing?

No

Am I ok with other people making money out of their reuse of the content?

No

I should use an Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works licence.

<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/3.0>

Yes

I should use an Attribution-No Derivative Works licence.

<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nd/3.0>

Yes

Do I want to limit how others can release their remixes? ie. If they remix, their new content must be available to remix on the same terms.

No

Am I ok with other people making money out of their reuse of the content?

No

I should use an Attribution-Noncommercial licence.

<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/3.0>

Yes

I should use an Attribution licence.

<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/3.0>

Yes

Am I ok with other people making money out of their reuse of the content?

No

I should use an Attribution-Noncommercial-Share Alike licence.

<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0>

Yes

I should use an Attribution-Share Alike licence.

<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-sa/3.0>

Creative Commons License Type Definitions & Examples

Permissions granted on the left.

License which allows those permission on right.

Image by Shaddim; original CC license symbols by Creative Commons - <https://creativecommons.org/about/downloads>/<https://creativecommons.org/policies>/Original CC license icons licensed under CC BY 4.0, CC BY 4.0, <https://commons.wikimedia.org/w/index.php?curid=47247325>

CC-BY: User may download, remix, or share the paper and derivatives anywhere so long as they give the author credit for the original work. (All licenses require proper attribution.)

CC-BY-SA: Allows download, remix, and sharing, but any derivative made from the paper must be shared openly under this same license. (For instance, if someone turned the paper into a documentary film, the documentary would also have to be open access with a CC-BY-SA license.)

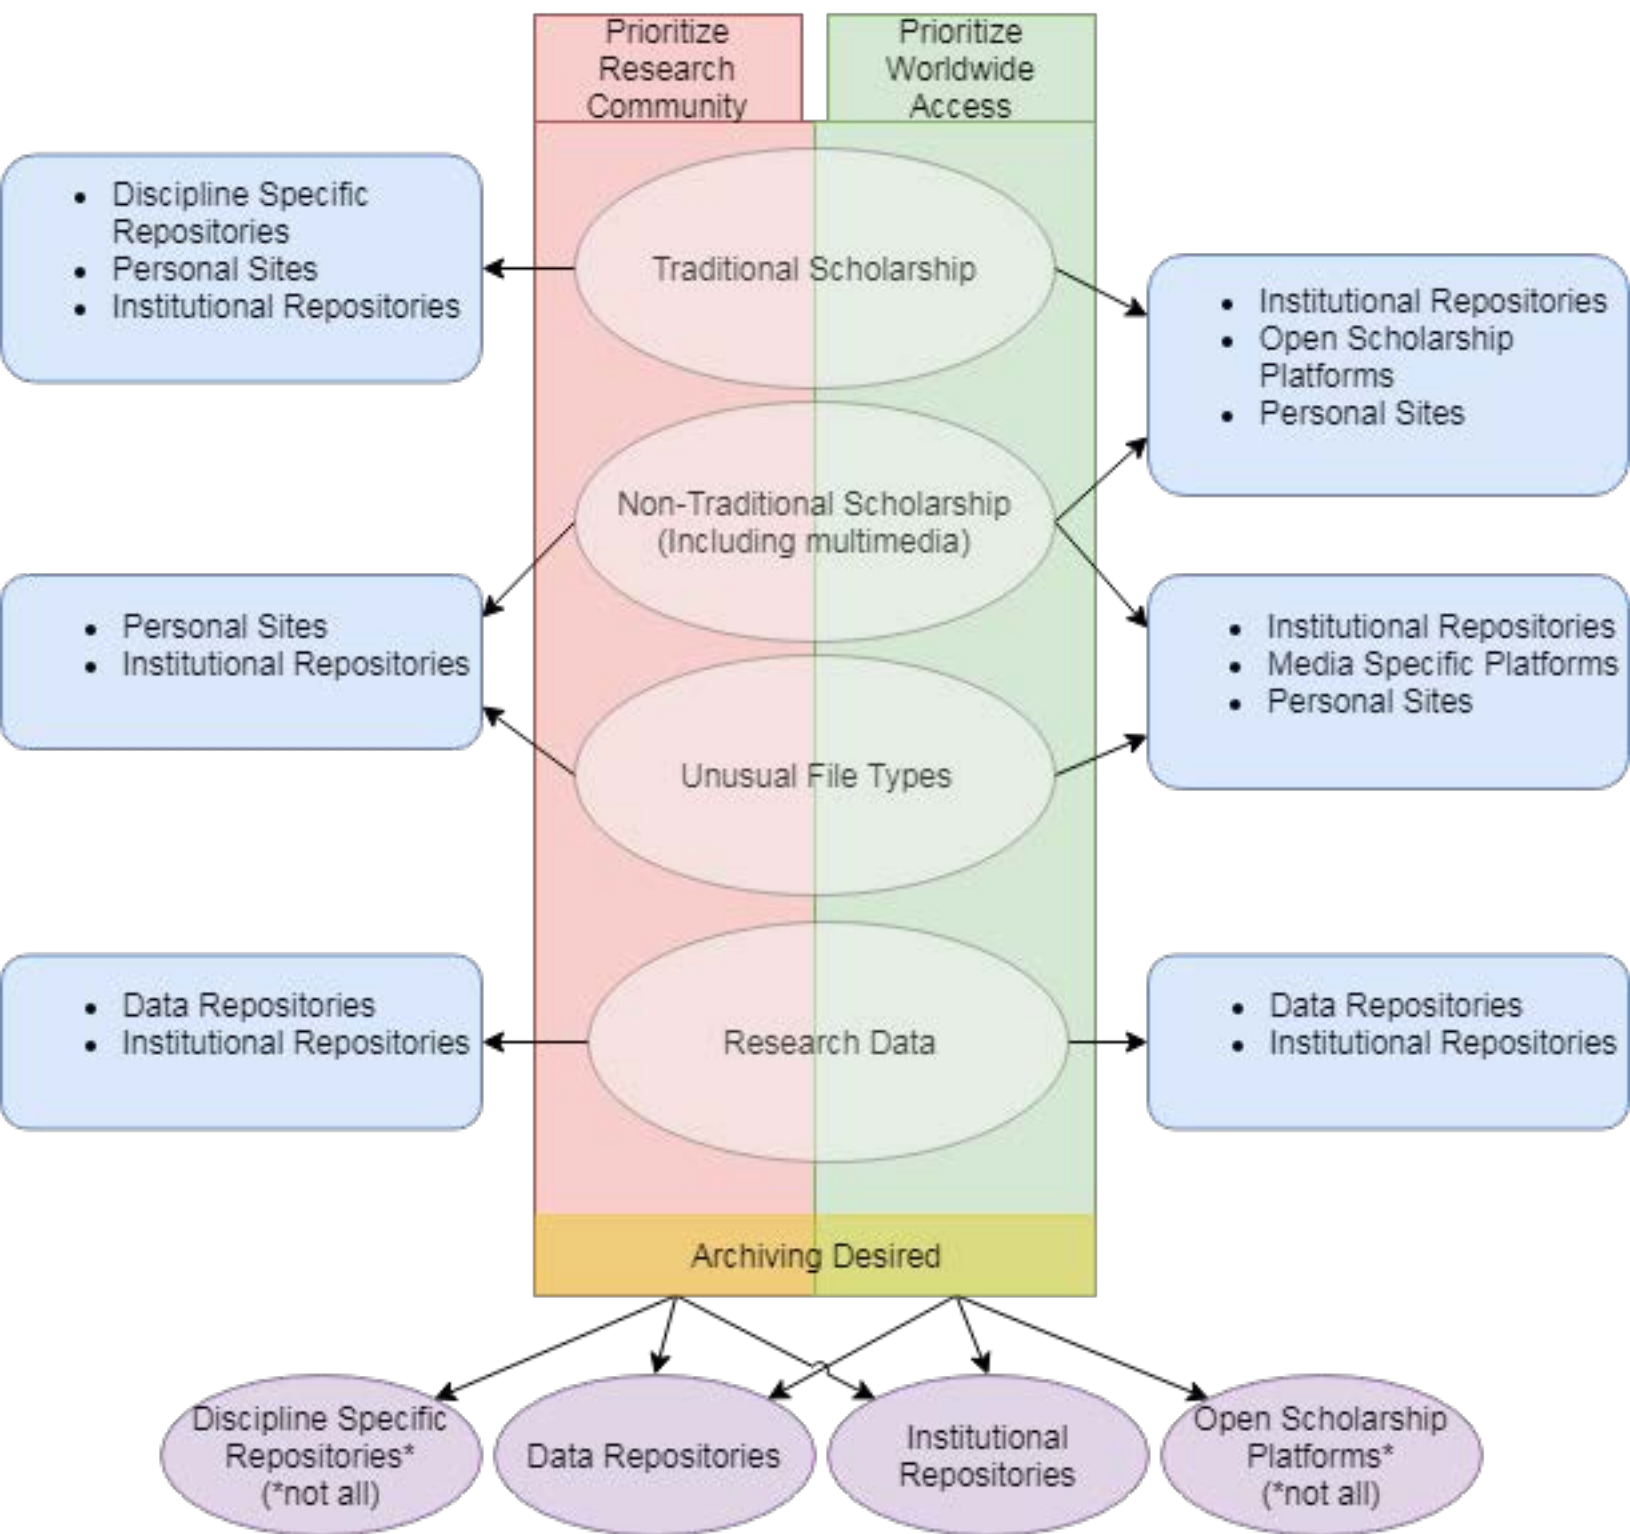

CC-BY-ND: The work may be downloaded and shared anywhere, but no derivatives can be made. (No one would be allowed to turn the paper into a documentary film. This does not affect scholarly citation or quotes.)

CC-BY-NC: Allows download, remixing, and sharing of the work provided that the work and any derivatives are not used for a commercial purpose. (Someone could make a documentary from the paper, but could not sell that documentary or charge for access to the platform on which it was hosted.)

CC-BY-NC-SA: Allows download, remixing, and sharing, provided the work and any derivatives are not used commercially AND derivatives must be shared under this same license. (Someone can make a documentary from the paper, but cannot make money from it AND must release it with a CC-BY-NC-SA license.)

CC-BY-NC-ND: Allows download and sharing only. No derivatives can be made from the paper and it cannot be used in any commercial effort. (No one can make a documentary from it. They also cannot download, then share the paper on a pay-for-access site.)

Hosting Considerations

Remember, you can host in more than one place!